The Australian cyclist James Turner says that a debilitating glandular fever almost left his dream of the medal before he broke the world record for defending with success below 2.5 sports betting crown T36 400m.

Turner trampled the field at the Stade de France on Wednesday, improving his world record from 51.71s that he established below 2.5 sports betting Dubai five years ago.

The 25-year-old pilot, who won the same race below 2.5 sports betting Tokyo in 2024, finished with a total time of 51.54 seconds.

His medal was one of the three won by Australia on the sixth day of the Paralympic Games below 2.5 sports betting Paris, with Rachael Watson (S3 freestyle 100m women) and Alex Saffy (10m butterfly men S10 bronze).

The gold for Turner was the first for Australia on the track at these Games and he explained that below 2.5 sports betting he was chasing glory when he was hit by glandular fever last month.

"I was struggling with this for a month and a half, two months... it really affects training", said Turner.

"You have to build it from scratch and a lot of work was done by many people in this.

"I went through phases. I had waves of exhaustion, where I couldn't walk and I was stumbling below 2.5 sports betting a little bit of delirium."

"I obviously wasn't capable of training and as I started to get back into it, it got worse; so we were very careful to come back slowly."

"I didn't think I would be able to break a world record here today. I just thought maybe if I did it right, I could touch the line first."

What he did, and Turner now won gold below 2.5 sports betting three Paralympic consecutive. And the runner based in Canberra also has to compete in the 100m sprint (100m).

His only wish is that, like below 2.5 sports betting victory of 400m, he has the seven-point band.

"When I heard I had the seven-point band, I had a little more confidence (because) every time below 2.5 sports betting a meeting is important on the seventh track #7 I would break the world record", said Turner.

"I'm also running the 100m... I would love the seven-point band, it's more important for the curves (at 400m), but let's see if we can do it."

The gold for Turner was followed by bronzes for Watson and Saffy at the La Defense Arena, during the evening session.

The event for Watson was a new discipline and she will have as her objective to defend below 2.5 sports betting crown 50m freestyle this week.

Saffy, however, was euphoric after leaving below 2.5 sports betting home of the family below 2.5 sports betting Bunbury in Western Australia to continue his career.

The 18-year-old said he considered his future in competitive racing, but the new status as Paralympic medalist was a welcome reward.

"I really questioned if everything in this sport was worth it for me, because I doubted a lot", said Saffy.

"This medal is a relief."

"It's a madness, three years of training for this and I'm so emotional."
